Leadership Management

30 marks /1 hr

Q 1. Read the following case study and answer the questions given below it: 10 marks

A new-age working mom and the youngest female Prime Minister of New Zealand, 37 year old Jacinda Ardern, has been praised for her effective management of the Covid-19 crisis. While superpowers like the USA and the UK were struggling with the pandemic, Ardern's strong leadership has led her country towards becoming coronavirus-free, a triumph that has amazed the world. She took quick and effective decisions and imposed a lockdown early before the large spread virus. Crisis communication was a crucial part of Ardern's strategical approach to the global pandemic, she communicated to the nation through casual Facebook live chats, took Q&A s and elaborated in detail on how the lockdown restrictions work. Knowing that the country's larger population is on Facebook, she was ready to go live even in the most casual clothes that made her relatable and approachable. It was this humanized essence of her leadership that helped the public understand the repercussions of the pandemic and it was effectively put under control in time!

"We need our leaders to be able to empathise with the circumstances of others; to empathise with the next generation that we're making decisions on behalf of".

"Lifting wages, closing the gender pay gap, living free from violence, having the choice to be a career, to have a career, be a mother – those are uppermost on my to-do list. Our extraordinary women deserve no less.". She also brought the substantial bill to ensure equal pay in New Zealand in 2020 but what's even unique about this equal-pay amendment is that it makes sure that it brings pay equity in sectors that have been historical underpaid.

From Gender Equality to fighting for the rights of the LGBTQAI community, Ardern has always been at the forefront of promoting equality in every form. In 2019, Ardern became the first New Zealand PM to attend the country's pride parade proudly and highlighted that LGBTQAI people are still experiencing bullying, mental health problems and discrimination even when the world is slowly embracing diversity and inclusion. She did all this with having a baby during her prime ministership.

On 15 March 2019, 51 people were fatally shot and 49 injured in two mosques in Christchurch. In a statement broadcast on television, Ardern offered condolences and stated that the shootings had been carried out by suspects with "extremist views" that have no place in New Zealand, or anywhere else in the world. She also described it as a well-planned terrorist attack. By so swiftly and decisively describing the shooting as a "terrorist attack", Ms Ardern seemed to show an awareness and consideration of the fact that many people feel officials are reluctant to use this word when an attacker is white, even if that attack is politically motivated.

Announcing a period of national mourning, Ardern was the first signatory of a national condolence book that she opened in the capital, Wellington. She also travelled to Christchurch to meet first responders and families of the victims.

She hugged the victims in Christchurch, wearing a black headscarf as a simple show of respect; she gave people the unifying cry "They are us"; and addressing parliament for the first time a few days later, she made a small but bold statement by opening her remarks with the Islamic greeting "As-Salaam Alaikum". She's combined this show of empathy with promises of concrete legislative and cultural change. A few hours after the attack, she announced a clampdown on the country's lax gun laws "within 10 days".
